

Slade Elementary was recently honored by the Wyoming Department of Education for exceeding expectations on its school performance rating for three consecutive years. As stated by the Department in its congratulatory letter: "This kind of performance is only reached through a genuine dedication to your students, and a commitment to excellence by all – your teachers, your parents, your community, and your board. As leaders in your district, you should be proud of the culture you have created and the direction you are moving."

Additionally, in his congratulatory letter, United States Senator John Barrasso, M.D., commented "At its core, education is the process of setting and achieving goals. Thanks to your hard work, your school surpassed our expectations and countered them with your own grand ambitions. With your guidance, Wyoming students will continue down this path of achievement and success."
